5 Fabulous Rosés That Are Not From Provence

Because sometimes the best surprises come from regions you least expect.

We're in the middle of rosé season, so it's time to round up some favorites! From Sancerre to Corsica and even to the Swiss alps, check out a few fabulous rosés I'm loving right now below.

J. de Villebois, Sancerre Rosé ($28, Amsterwine)

We all know and love a classic white Sancerre, but the value in the region is found in its lovely Pinot Noir reds and rosés. This is a fresh, acid-driven rosé with notes of raspberry, strawberry, and of course the characteristic minerality (think wet stone and salinity) that all Sancerre's wines are known for. Pick up a bottle or two. for your next summer picnic and you won't regret it.
